Huerta Rejects John Lind's Proposals for Peace.

U. S. Envoy to Mexico City Receives Uncertain Rebuff From President of Southern Republic and United States is Given Until Midnight to Officially Recognize Huerta Government.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18.—The United States government has been given until midnight tonight by President Huerta to recognize Mexico, it is officially stated.

The government is not specific in the public announcement as to what course will then be pursued, but it is understood that it means the severing of all relations between the two countries.

Replying today to President Wilson's note, which was recently delivered to the Mexican government thru ex-Governor John Lind, Huerta refuses mediation in the Mexican situation or any similar suggestion made by a foreign government.

Mr. Lind has forwarded Gen. Huerta's answer to Washington and is awaiting a reply.

President Huerta, in his reply told the United States that he would tolerate no interference, even tho that interference might be characterized as friendly mediation. The character of the reply of Washington to President Huerta's note will determine the next action in the international drama.

All those connected with the American embassy refused to admit the receipt of the note, and that it had been sent was not admitted officially by the Mexican Government. At the embassy there was an evident desire to appear optimistic, and one was led to believe that Mr. Lind still hoped for a continuation of the negotiations. Those familiar with the workings of the Mexican administration expressed doubt as to the government again opening the subject for discussion.

Unofficial Note Received.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan received unofficial reports from Mexico City tonight that President Huerta, after rejecting the proposals by Mr. Lind, issued an official statement, in which he gave the United States until midnight tonight (Mexican or Central time), to recognize him (Huerta).

The despatches did not indicate what steps Huerta would take if the American Government failed to extend the recognition.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, while impressed with the reports, would not accept them as authentic. Both will await official despatches before deciding on any action. The president will not recognize Huerta.

After receiving the despatches, the president and secretary of state on retiring for the night, indicated that nothing would be done by them until tomorrow at the earliest.

STEAMER GOES DOWN

State of California Sinks and Two Score Drown.

Liner Strikes a Rock Off the Alaskan Coast and Founders Within a Few Minutes—Passengers Imprisoned in State Rooms, Perish Like Rats in a Trap—Rafts Saved Survivors.

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 18.—(Can. Press).—Twenty-five or more passengers and seven members of the crew of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's steamer, State of California, perished Sunday morning in Cambier Bay, 90 miles south of Juneau, when the vessel struck an uncharted rock and sank in three minutes with many passengers imprisoned in their state-rooms. The steamship left Seattle last Wednesday night for Skagway and way points. The pursuer lost all his records and it is not possible to give a complete list of the missing.

Following is a list of the dead whose bodies have been recovered: Mrs. A. Birnbaum, Miss Lillian Ward, daughter of Edward C. Ward, assistant manager of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co., died after being taken off a life raft; Mrs. Stella Reardan, Mrs. Clara Vanderlass, Mrs. Nellie B. Ward, mother of Miss Ward; four unidentified women.

The Missing.
Following is a partial list of the missing, who are believed to have perished:

Miss Anne L. Cassidy, Miss May Dixon, W. A. Dyer, Blanche Frick, Minette Harlan, Leslie Hobro, manager of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co.'s office in San Francisco; J. Holman, Miss Alice Johnson, Lillian B. Norman, Nick Pittulas, Miss Reardan, Mrs. C. E. Spithill and child, Ben A. Wade, Miss Wilson.

The survivors, crew and passengers, are being taken to Seattle on the steamer Jefferson, and will arrive there Thursday.

A great hole was torn in the bottom of the State of California. The vessel and cargo, mail and express are a total loss.

The ship was valued at $400,000. The steamship Jefferson of the Alaska Steamship Line, southbound, heard the wireless call of the sinking vessel and turned back to rescue the survivors, who had taken to small boats and life rafts. Ten of the passengers had suffered so severely from exposure that it was necessary to take them to a hospital in Juneau for treatment.

The State of California, an iron steamship of 2276 gross tons, was built at Philadelphia in 1879 and carried a crew of 75 men. For many years she had carried passengers between Puget Sound and San Francisco.

The wrecked vessel was commanded by Capt. Thomas H. Cann, Jr., who had command of the steamship Valencia on her last trip from Seattle to San Francisco, and who was transferred to another steamer when the Valencia reached that port, thus barely missing being on that ship when she went ashore at Cape Beals, B.C., Jan. 22, 1906, with a loss of 117 lives.

The State of California was going at full speed when she struck the reef, and a great portion of the ship's bottom was torn off, letting in a flood of water which quickly engulfed the boat. Most

A week ago a young man from a band of gypsies in the wilds and took refuge with the Oka. He could remember of his history previous to being a member of the band, other than he had been called Frank and his former home was in northern Ontario.

Presence of the wanderer was reported to the Montreal police, and one of the young man recognized him in a newspaper. The paper notified and went to Montreal where they positively identified him by a birthmark. He is being taken by the police as a witness in some of the gypsies, who are now being charged with kidnapping.

Press.)—Lieut.-Gov. Martin H. Glynn is the lawful chief executive of New York State, pending the outcome of impeachment proceedings against Gov. Sulzer, according to an official opinion rendered today by Attorney-General Thomas Carmody to Secretary of State Mitchell May. Mr. Carmody holds that the assembly was within its rights in instituting impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session.

"When the governor is impeached," says the opinion, "all of his powers are automatically suspended until he has been acquitted or the impeachment proceedings dismissed by the court of impeachment. In the meantime the lieutenant-governor acts as governor. This is the plain intent of the constitution. Any other construction would nullify its express provision."

With reference to the authority of the assembly to initiate impeachment proceedings, the attorney-general says:

"It is my opinion that if the assembly was not assembled, either in an extraordinary or regular session it might assemble itself and proceed to the discharge of its powers in this regard. Otherwise the governor of the state could prevent the impeachment of himself and his friends in office for crimes, however great, after the adjournment of the regular session of the legislature by the simple process of omitting to call the legislature in session."

Neither Gov. Sulzer, Lieut.-Gov. Glynn nor their counsel would discuss the attorney-general's opinion tonight.

LUMBERMAN MURDERED.

Wealthy Duluth Man Victim of Foul Play, Says Jury.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Can. Press.)—Murder was the verdict returned late today by the coroner's jury, which investigated the death of John McAlpine, Duluth's wealthy lumberman, found shot to death in the basement of his palatial east end home last Friday.

The jury found that death was caused by a gunshot wound in the head, the weapon being in the hands of a person unknown. The next official body to take up the mystery probably will be the grand jury, which meets in September.

McAlpine was found dead in his home about 3 o'clock in the morning of August 15 by his stepson, Dale McAlpine. He had testified that when he first went into the basement, he did not see the revolver, which was later found a short distance from the body. Others in the house were the wife of the deceased, Mrs. Dale McAlpine, and Miss Margaret Bergen, the maid. All declare they heard no shot fired.

ferred to another steamer when the Valencia reached that port, thus barely missing being on that ship when she went ashore at Cape Beais. B.C., Jan. 22, 1906, with a loss of 117 lives.

The State of California was going at full speed when she struck the reef, and a great portion of the ship's bottom was torn off, letting in a flood of water which quickly engulfed the boat. Most of the passengers and members of the crew who perished were in their staterooms, and there was no time to get them out before the boat went down.

The crew numbered 52 men. Captain Cann and 40 men are on the Jefferson, returning to Seattle; seven perished and First Officer Abernathy and three men are standing by the wreck. The ship is sunk in deep water, and there is no hope of salvage. The Jefferson was only a short distance away when she picked up the S.O.S. call, and when she arrived at the scene of the disaster the survivors were in the lifeboats and on life rafts. It was broad daylight. There is no possibility that any of the missing reached shore.

Gambier Bay is accounted by mariners as one of the most dangerous stretches of water in Alaska. The bay had never been navigated by large vessels until last year, and it is said it has never been officially surveyed. There is a reef that must be skirted for a long distance, and big boats have very little room in which to turn.

Brave Rescue of Boy.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 18.—(Special.)—Thos. Harbor was the hero in a rescue in the Grand River on Sunday. He was swimming below Jubilee Terrace when he heard the cries of a boy some distance up the river. He got to the spot, passing two men, who also heard the boy's shouts, and plunged into the rescue of Leo O'Reilly, son of Jas. O'Reilly, proprietor of the American hotel. The boy had gone down the third time and it required a half hour's work by the rescuer to bring him to consciousness. There is a movement on foot to secure Harbor a life-saving medal.

The finished product is used for flavoring confectionery and beer, as well as entering into the makeup of many brands of tobacco. Some idea of the extent of the industry may be gathered when it is stated that on the average 8,000 tons of dry licorice root is shipped from Aleppo annually, while Bagdad yields another 6,000 tons, Antioch 4,000 and Damascus 500 tons.

Professor Barry once amused Judge Ball by an application on behalf of a man who was a dealer in horses and sugar sticks. The incongruity of his avocation struck the judge, who remarked, "What a strange combination of trades!"

A PROFITABLE DEAL

PARTY FRIEND MAKES NEARLY $100,000 IN FEW DAYS.

The Prince Albert homestead scandal has come near having a competitor close to Montreal, in the recent purchase by Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes of a piece of land for the erection of a military training school. For years past there has been discussion as to the establishment of such a school near Montreal. It offered such opportunities for expenditures that Col. Hughes lost no time in getting the matter on. Various sites were considered, and naturally party friends of Commerce, and the Manufacturers Association, presented to the late Harbour Commissioners of Montreal—Messrs. G. W. Stephens, C. C. Ballantyne and L. E. Geoffrion, three superb silver punch bowls which have been subscribed for by two hundred of Montreal's leading business men. These were inscribed as being presented in recognition of the invaluable work done for Montreal by the late Harbour Commission.

Messrs. Stephens, Ballantyne and Geoffrion were compelled to resign from the Harbour Commission soon after the Borden government came to power. The pressure which compelled them to resign was frankly political and they were practically dismissed as soon as the Borden government could choose their successors. The recent incident gives the answer of the business community to the carnival of dismissals organized under the Borden-Rogers-Pelletier regime.

A STRIKING CONTRAST.

BETWEEN LIBERAL CONSTITUTIONALISTS IN ENGLAND AND THE BORDEN OLIGARCHY.

On June 27th last, the advisability of altering the rules of procedure of

to convey to the people of Canada the impression that Great Britain has ordered three additional battle ships in a panic because Canada is not sending over the $35,000,000 gift.

Mr. Churchill said there were two courses open to him. Premier Borden was told by Sir George Ross that there were two courses open to him. He could appeal to the people on the $35,000,000 gift proposition, or he could abandon it and provide as much money as was necessary for starting three or even more battle ships by a vote from parliament under the Naval Act of 1910. He preferred to do nothing for the Empire rather than aid in Imperial defence under the Laurier Naval Bill.

MORE MISSTATEMENTS.

TORY ORGANS MISREPRESENT AUSTRALIA'S NAVAL COURSE.

Evidently inspired efforts have been made of late by the Tory press to make it appear that Australia is having great difficulty with her naval programme, especially with the construction of ships in Australian yards. It is even vaguely hinted that this may be abandoned, the object being to discredit the Laurier proposition for Canadian ship building.

This is what Australian cables said on August 13th with the official programme laid down by the new Commonwealth government.

"A naval conference is being urged on the British government. Meanwhile Rear Admiral Henderson's programme will be generally adhered to. The provisions for the building of War ships locally will be expedited and high professional advice will be obtained immediately regarding sites and plans and the cost of work for naval bases."

The Australians are not tainted with the Borden government's fear of doing things for themselves. It is easy to see why the Tory press is anxious to pervert the meaning of the Australian Commonwealth Government's message to the Empire.

WHAT WILL THEY DO WITH IT?

The village of Millbrook, Ont., is among the latest places to be honored by Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes with a new drill hall, which is to cost $11,000. Millbrook's population according to the last census was 793, as compared with 917 in 1901. "The Colonel" should be more popular with contractors than with the taxpayers.

BATTLES IN THE BLOOD.

Antitoxins Fight the Germs of Their Particular Disease.

When any animal has a certain disease its body produces large quantities of the particular antitoxin that will fight that disease. If the blood of this animal be introduced into another animal the latter will get the disease, but in a milder form, and will at the same time be stimulated to secrete large quantities of the antitoxin. It is now capable of resisting an attack by an army of powerful germs and becomes "immune" to the real disease.

If its blood be drawn and filtered to free it from red and white corpuscles the serum that is left is merely the watery part of the blood heavily charged with the antitoxins of that disease. This, injected into the blood of a person suffering from it, re-enforces the antitoxins already there and

They Are Great Mimics and Burlesque Legislation.

They are the greatest mimics world. They can take off the crasies and humorous peculiarities the senators to a "T."

Sometimes when the senate sitting and too many visitors and bosses are not around to observe proceedings the pages themselves into a solemn senatorial session, will impersonate the vice president, the chief clerk, and various other boys will pretend either their favorite senators or senators of home states. Each occupies the seat to which the senator is entitled.

Bang! goes the vice president's and the extraordinary session of has convened. There is always argument as to which senator be recognized when the regular of business is reached. Every capable current subject is discussed a goodly sprinkling of "baseball" which always carries wilder by which each page senator be entitled to an annual self-renewal pass for all the season's games. A bill which is almost sure close to Montreal, in the recent purchase by Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes of a piece of land for the erection of a military training school. For years past there has been discussion as to the establishment of such a school near Montreal. It offered such opportunities for expenditures that Col. Hughes lost no time in getting the matter on. Various sites were considered, and naturally party friends looked for profit. Apparently they were not disappointed. Major W. T. Rodden of Montreal, one of the oldest military men of the metropolis, and a reliable Conservative, made a gross profit of $95,004.

This is the history of the deal. On May 27th, 1911, Major Rodden bought a property at Dorval for $48,500, as an investment. Later on came the change of government, and the renewed talk of buying a site for the proposed military school. On June 8th, 1912, Major Rodden bought a farm adjoining his Dorval property, for $36,496. Sixteen days later he sold the whole block, which had cost him $84,996, to the Dominion of Canada, represented by Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes for $180,000, considerably more than doubling his money.

Laborer attempts are being made to explain away this deal. It is claimed that the land is worth the money; that it could be sold to-day for more than was paid for it, and so on. But the facts will not down. A party friend knows that the property will be wanted by the government. He purchased it, and a few days later sells it to the government at a profit of nearly $100,000.

Could not the government have purchased the property through its own agent and saved the people this $95,004? But what's the use! Could not the government have sold the Prince Albert $375,000 homestead instead of giving it to a party friend for $10?

EXTRAVAGANCE KEEPS UP.

NO MATTER HOW REVENUE GROWS GOVERNMENT SPENDS MORE.

During the month of July, Canada's national debt increased by $6,529,104. During the present fiscal year, the treasury of Canada has paid out to Mackenzie and Mann, about $6,000,000 as instalment on the $15,000,000 presented to the Canadian Northern Railway by way of subsidies last session. Mr. Borden and his colleagues have used their powers in parliament to increase the debt of Canada by a clear gift to these railroad promoters which has already taken $5 out of the pocket of every head of a family in Canada.

The new debt of the Dominion at the end of July was $28,069,678 as compared with $20,540,573 at the end of June. Expenditure on ordinary accounts for the four months since the end of March totaled $28,400,376 and on capital accounts $13,014,570—the latter an increase of over $9,000,000 as compared with last year.

There is no possibility of doubt that Mr. Borden is the head of the greatest spending government Canada has ever known. The time is not far distant when even the bounding revenues taken from the people will not suffice, and another loan will be necessary.

WHAT BUSINESS MEN THINK.

On Tuesday this week a number of trade organizations of Montreal, including the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, and the recent incident gives the answer of the business community to the carnival of dismissals organized under the Borden-Rogers-Pelletier regime.

A STRIKING CONTRAST.

BETWEEN LIBERAL CONSTITUTIONALISTS IN ENGLAND AND THE BORDEN OLIGARCHY.

On June 27th last, the advisability of altering the rules of procedure of the British House of Commons was considered. The London Times states that: "It was moved by Mr. Illingsworth (Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury) and agreed that a select committee be appointed to consider and report whether, and if so what, alterations are desired in the practice and procedure of this house with regard to public business: that the committee do consist of 18 members." During the discussion of this resolution, several names were suggested or objected to by the Opposition, and the Liberal government consented to various changes.

On April 9th last, Premier Borden in the Canadian parliament moved—"That Rule 17 of this House be amended by adding thereto, the following"—and then was added the famous "gag" provision for choking off uncomfortable debate, which was so put by the enforcement of antiquated rules, that it was jammed through the House without the possibility of any amendment. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had intended to propose an amendment, based on British constitutional procedure, to refer the proposed changes of rules to Mr. Speaker and a select committee which should report to the House. This was peremptorily "steam-rollered" by the government, and they arbitrarily enforced their "gag" rules on the minority.

When considering the contrast on the just constitutional procedure of the Liberal government in Great Britain, and the arbitrary gagging of the Opposition in Canada by the Borden Tory Government, it is small wonder that Sir Wilfrid exclaimed—

"Heaven is my witness, I would rather stand here to-day, defeated and in Opposition by that appeal to the people, than stand over there in office by the power of the 'gag'."

WHAT MR. CHURCHILL SAID. DECLARED IT WAS NOT NECESSARY TO INCREASE NAVAL PROGRAMME.

Discussing the Naval position in the British parliament on July 13th last, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, dealt with the position caused by the defeat of the Borden Naval Bill.

Mr. Churchill said in part, referring to the news received of the rejection of the Canadian Naval Aid Bill: "There were two courses open to us. We could have laid down three extra ships in place of the three Canadian ships and make them additional to our existing and prospective program. We could do so still, but it is not at present clear that this step, which would have meant the addition of $8,500,000 to the navy estimates, spread over the next two or three years, is necessary, and it certainly ought not to be taken until it is necessary."

This makes several points clear. First that Mr. Borden miscalculated the cost of his proposed three battleships. He figured it at $35,000,000.

Mr. Churchill estimates it would cost about $12,500,000. Mr. Churchill made it perfectly clear that he had no visions of lightning on the horizon. He did not even hear the thunder booming, or fear any impending storm that might burst upon the Empire with fury and disaster. He was not alarmed at the Borden hysterics and merely remarked that in the circumstances it was not necessary to add to the British Naval programme.

Yet in face of this statement, Mr. Borden and his followers have sought to immunize the real disease.

If its blood be drawn and filtered to free it from red and white corpuscles the serum that is left is merely the watery part of the blood heavily charged with the antitoxins of that disease. This, injected into the blood of a person suffering from it, re-enforces the antitoxins already there and speedily routs the enemy by neutralizing the poisons that the toxic germs are liberating.

Serum is prepared in two ways—one by taking it from the blood of another animal, the other by a culture from the blood of the patient himself.

There are only one or two diseases that can be cured by medicine. In all others the medicine is given merely to stimulate the natural production of antitoxins. If we knew how to make an antitoxin for every disease we should have no more use for medicine. The number of diseases for which antitoxins are being discovered is multiplying year by year. —New York World.

GREECE HAD THE RECALL.

Only in the Old Days the System Was Called "Ostracism."

In the palmy days of the Greek republics, many centuries ago, as historians tell us, when a man rose to such a height of power or influence that he became a possible menace to the state, the citizens took a vote on his case as an "undesirable." This was sent to the senate, and, if the vote was sufficiently large and representative, that body passed a resolution in which the too distinguished citizen was invited, in polite diplomatic terms, to take a few years of retirement abroad—in other words, he was officially exiled for the good of the state.

This was "ostracism," so called from the fact, it is explained, that the voting citizens wrote their names on oyster shells, and it was instituted as a measure of security to the commonwealth. Any citizen of great wealth or influence or who had a large personal following which might, in an emergency, be used to the detriment of the state was liable to receive this distinguished mark of public consideration. It was a kind of primitive "recall," which had the advantage of being equally applicable to "ins" and "outs."

Those early Greeks were wonderful fellows, who knew how to deal with knotty problems of their day, which doubtless included grafting and other human peculiarities not unknown in our own time. If an election did not suit them or if any man swelled too far above his fellows there was always the leveling oyster as a wholesome corrective in reserve.—Christian Herald.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

"You remember old St. Collin used to be around here last don't you?" remarked the stater at Seekonk.

"You mean the chap that had a way of doing things different from any one else?"

"That's the feller," replied the master. "Well, he committed suicide 'bout a month ago."

"Why, that's terrible! But did that differently too?"

"Differently!" ejaculated the master. "Why, I should say. Say, that feller went out and a couple of quarts of gasoline, heber down, then lighted up a clay pipe and started a smokin' folks hereabout wanted to buy aces held over the remains; but all we ever found was a section old vest that somehow got kept a tree. Well, it was about things different."—Chicago Record.

Checking It Up to Father.

That parents should exercise greatest care in speaking of facts in the presence of little was proved by the experience of a North avenue resident recently.

The man in question was a maiden aunt, who is extremely and very sensitive about it.

A four-year-old boy who denied his father looked very careful at the round form of his relation then inquired, with a friendly smile:

"Aunt Myrtle, you don't have ashes in the bed to keep from out, do you?"

Then when the man held hands in consternation the young exclaimed:

"There, papa; she says she d.—Youngstown Telegram.

FELINE FAMILY HISTORY.

Here Are the Facts, Although You May Not Believe Them.

Why shouldn't a respectable cat sit on the fence and howl when extracts from its family history read like this:

"Throughout the tertiary formations, from the upper eocene onward, there appears a remarkable family of cats, with a dentition still more specialized than that of the felinae, the true felines, retaining other skeletal features of a more primitive type of cats. These were the machaerodontinae, which survived until the pleistocene, both in Europe and in America."

The information was found in a geology student's paper, "The Evolution of the Domesticated Cat." Perhaps you are a little rusty on cat history and you find it difficult to remember. This illuminating bit of information will freshen it in your memory:

"The Pliocene period was the period of the carnivora. The felids included the machaerodonts, machaerodus and acinoropsis, besides varieties analogous to the leopard and lynx. In this epoch appeared the servals (Felis christofori). At the time of the Felis christofori there appeared also the European

IMITATION PEARLS.

They Are Made With Essence d'Orient, a Fish Scale Product.

As the real pearl comes from the oyster, so to a large extent is the manufacture of artificial pearls dependent on a certain species of fish. The complete processes of manufacture are, of course, trade secrets, but it is interesting to know that it is from the brilliant scales of the ablet, or blay, that essence d'orient is produced, as with this essence imitation pearls are made.

The blay is a small fish with a green back and a white belly, and the essence is obtained exclusively from its white scales, which are covered with a pigment of metallic appearance. They are first treated with ammonia and then with fish glue, a powder being first obtained and then a paste which can be easily spread on glass.

In the early stages of pearl manufacture, about 1656, this essence d'orient was applied to little balls of plaster, but the temperature and the damp heat of the human body modified the adhesive qualities of the pearly matter and caused changes of color. In 1686 a Parisian named Jacquin invented a method of covering small glass balls with this essence, thereby producing the first practical artificial pearl.

In the north and east of France and in Germany blay fishing is actively pursued. About 4,000 are required to produce a pound of scales, which in turn gives a quarter of a pound of essence. —New York Press.

WINDOW GLASS DECAYS.

It Gets So Brittle In Time That It May Be Cut With Shears.

It is generally supposed that glass is practically immortal. But it has been demonstrated that glass exposed to the elements will decay and in time become so rotten that it is worthless.

Window glass exposed to the heat and cold and varying winds will, after a number of years, become so brittle that it can be cut with a pair of shears. It is said that light and darkness have different effects on glass, and this alternation alone will cause it to become fragile and in time worthless.

It is almost impossible to remove old windows from a building without breaking many of the panes of glass. New glass can be handled with much more carelessness.

There is a certain elasticity to new glass that leaves glass which has faced the weather for a number of years.

Street fakers who travel throughout the country selling scissors will obtain a lot of old window glass and show the crowds how wonderfully their shears will cut by clipping off strips of the glass just as a person would cut paper, when in fact the feat is due to the fact that the glass is actually rotten. —Harper's Weekly.

Many Names of the Thames.

The Thames has been the cause of much controversy. Its name has been variously stated as Tameses, Tamese, Tamises (at the juncture of the Isis and Tame, near Dorchester), Tamisa, Tamesa, Thamisia, Thamesis and finally Isis (where it flows between the Oxfordshire and the Buckinghamshire shores). Thus at Oxford it is still often called the Isis until it receives the shallow river Tame just below Dor-

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—"A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy."—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

Read What Another Woman says:

Peoria, Ill.—"I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.

"After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.

"You may publish this if you wish." —Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Such letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for woman's ills. Why don't you try it?

A CRESCENT OF RUINS.

The Curious Old Cliff Dwellings of the National Mesa Verde.

In the Mesa Verde National park, in southwestern Colorado, are 300 cliff dwellings, of which only the three largest have been repaired. The largest ruin, called Cliff palace, stands about a thousand feet above the bottom of the canyon and 300 feet below the top of the ledge. All the houses connect and open into one another, the entire settlement forming a crescent about 300 feet in length from end to end.

As we contemplate these silent ruins it is hard to believe that at one time they resounded with the hum of industry, the laughter of children, the droning of priests, and the strident cry of the sentinels calling the warriors to battle. The dwellers of these abandoned communities have left no written record, but the shape of the structures and the relics that have been dug from the debris of centuries give some idea of how these people lived and moved and had their being.

The main houses were built on a ledge close to its front, and back of this was an open space that answered the purpose of a court, a street, a play-

Hit Them Both.
remember old St. Collins, what he was around here last season, don't you?" remarked the station master. "Well, he committed 'bout a month ago." "That's terrible! But did he do anything else?" "He did do a lot of things, but I don't know if they were any better or not." "Why, I should say he did. He went out and bought a lot of quarts of gasoline, drank it up, then lighted up his old pipe and started smoking. The station master wanted to have served over the remains; but, Lord, never found was a section of St. Collins that somehow got ketchuped in. Well, St. Collins was found to do different."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Checking It Up to Father.
The parents should exercise the same care in speaking of family secrets in the presence of little children as they do in the presence of a grown-up person. The experience of a young man in question was visiting a young woman, who is extremely stout and sensitive about it. The young man, who accompanied him, looked very carefully at the form of his relative and quivered with a friendly smile. "Myrtle, you don't have to put me in the bed to keep from sleeping you?" "When the man held up his head in consternation the young man said: 'He, papa; she says she doesn't.'"—Boston Telegram.

AN ENGINEERING FEAT.

Building a Railroad Across the Ice and Against Time.

Along the Copper river valley lies a standard-gauge railroad, 191 miles in length, the building of which was filled with romance. Its construction is regarded as a distinct feat in world's engineering. The road crosses the river between two glaciers (Childs and Miles).

The false work of the bridge was laid on the ice in winter. Men were hired to work night and day. M. J. Heney, the contractor, the man who built another "impossible" road across the mountains from Skagway, and his chief engineer, E. C. Hawkins, conceived the idea of using the river ice for the bridge scaffolding.

As the spring approached hundreds of men were kept busy every minute of the day and night, for if not completed by the time the ice burst all the work and material would have been lost.

The ice went out, carrying the false work with it, less than an hour after the spike was driven in the connecting span and the work was completed. The bridge cost $1,400,000.—"Alaska, an Empire in the Making," by John J. Underwood.

At Sea in a Coffin.

It was the French assassin Lupi who escaped to sea from Cayenne in a coffin. He managed to get some nails, tar and cotton, and one dark night he got into the coffin shed. He selected a fine, stanch and seaworthy coffin and fastened the lid in order to turn it into a deck, leaving a cockpit sufficient to enable him to crawl in. He calked all the joints as well as he could, and when this work was finished he made a pair of paddles out of two planks. Then he brought out his craft with great precaution. Without much difficulty he reached the water's edge. Silently and slowly he proceeded in the hope of reaching either Venezuela or British Guiana, 150 nautical miles distant. Fortunately or unfortunately for Lupi, the steamer Abeille, returning from the Antilles, off Paramaribo picked him up half drowned and almost in a fainting condition, and a few hours later he was in irons in his cell.

variously stated as Tameses, Tamis, Tamises (at the juncture of the Isis and Tame, near Dorchester), Tamisa, Tamesa, Thamisia, Thamesis and finally Isis (where it flows between the Oxfordshire and the Buckinghamshire shores). Thus at Oxford it is still often called the Isis until it receives the shallow river Tame just below Dorchester, from which point it is called Thames. Historians trace this error to an early attempted division of the Latin word Tamesis into two words, Tame isis or Tame isis, suggested perhaps by the existence of the Tame in Buckinghamshire. The Saxons called it the Thames, ancient maps and documents designating it Thamesis Fluvius.—From "In Thamesland."

A Pioneer Tourist.

Thomas Pennant was the great pioneer of the tribe of tourists. He discovered Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Man, taking with him a tame Welsh artist of genius to illustrate his travels. "I have had the hardihood," he wrote in 1771, "to venture on a journey to the remotest part of north Britain." So alluring was the account of his exploration that the country has ever since been inundated with southern visitors. Of Ireland he was able to make only an imperfect report, because of the "conviviality" of the people, and of the Isle of Man his impressions have perished. Pennant corresponded with Linnaeus and met Voltaire, whom he found to be a "master of English oaths."—London Standard.

Harvard Then a College of Children.

In 1685, when elected president of Harvard, the Rev. Increase Mather refused to resign the pastorate of the North church in Boston for the sake of "forty or fifty children." Therefore he used to ride back and forth from Boston to Cambridge, charging to the college the cost of shoeing and baling his horse and mending his saddle. Many of these students were but twelve or thirteen years old.

The main houses were built on a ledge close to its front, and back of this was an open space that answered the purpose of a court, a street, a playground or a place for industrial pursuits, such as weaving and pottery making. At intervals along the front were towers and bastions, and in the interior were kivas or secret chambers used for religious ceremonies. In every village were storehouses to provide a supply of provisions in times of war or failure of crops.

Leigh Hunt's Chaotic Home.

A curious description of Leigh Hunt's house, where the poet lived with his wife and six children, is that given by Carlyle, as recorded in "Bulletin and Review of the Keats-Shelley Memorial, Rome."

"Hunt's house excels all you have ever read of—a poetical tinkermong without parallel even in literature. In his family room, where are a sickly large wife and a whole shoal of well conditioned, wild children, you will find half a dozen rickety chairs gathered from half a dozen different hucksters. On these and around them and over the dusty table and ragged carpet lie all kinds of litter—books, papers, eggshells, scissors and, last night when I was there, the torn heart of a half quarter loaf. His own room he keeps cleaner."

A Real Born Lady.

The word "lady" has been variously defined. Perhaps the best test, however, of "ladylikeness" is that cited by G. W. E. Russell in one of his books. "A good woman who let furnished apartments in a country town describing a lodger who had apparently 'known better days' said: 'I am positive she was a real born lady, for she hadn't the least idea of how to do anything for herself. It took her hours to peel her potatoes.'" The admiration of the worker for the "out of work" is one of the strangest phenomena of our modern civilization.—London Graphic.

HEROIC WOMEN.

West is Full of Stories of Brave Deeds.

A bright young woman in the newer part of British Columbia is the heroine of a bear story that is quite true. She is a farmer's daughter, and one of her daily duties is to milk the cows. One evening not long ago she was so engaged when a bear suddenly came out of the bush a few feet away from her.
The bucket was partly filled with rich Jersey milk, but the girl left it on the ground and beat a hasty retreat, which was precisely what Bruin wanted. With much relish he emptied the bucket, and then ambled away.

The next evening the milkmaid was better prepared, and when she went to the pasture she carried the bucket
in one hand and in the other a shotgun, which she leaned against a tree;
this because she looked for a return visit of the milk-loving bear. She was not disappointed. The pail was nearly filled this time when Bruin appeared, coming toward her in a very evident hurry. The girl repeated her flight of the evening before, and the bear again made up to the bucket.
When his head was comfortably into the milk, the gun, loaded with number six shot, was very precisely aimed,
and a second or two later Bruin lay low.

The point of this story is that the women who live in the frontier country have need of keeping their wits about them. And, as a matter of fact, most of them do. Many tales are told of the bravery, fortitude, and remarkable endurance of woman settlers in the remote places of the West and North, some of whom have also proved themselves the possessors of exceptional ability and business keenness.

Thus there is an honor roll of at least a half-dozen women in Alaska who played the part of mining prospector
so well that they made good stakes and won fame and fortune. They were, in the theory and practice of placer mining as any man in the North, and proved it by results. It is told of one of these venturesome six that once, to save her husband's bank at Nome from failure, she traveled three hundred miles in midwinter, alone and by dog-team, carrying a substantial clean-up
of gold nuggets from her own holdings.
By day and night, through snow and blizzard, she kept to the trail, and reached Nome, with her golden relief,
just in time to avert the threatened disaster.

Another woman, not a gold-hunter, mushed 1,450 miles from Kampart to Whitehorse, in the Yukon. She did it alone, too, and in the dead of a deadly winter. With her train of dogs she made an average of twenty-five miles a day, and on one or two days covered thirty-five miles. That is good traveling on the winter trail, even for a man,
and especially good for a woman when
for the greater part of the way she ran,
not rode, holding only by her hands to the bars of the dog-sleigh. For on some days it was too cold to ride; fifty and sixty and seventy below zero, which means that one must keep moving.

Just like a man, this woman musher rode and tramped, sometimes breaking a way ahead for the dogs when she zero-fog was too dense for them to see. Just like a man, too, when out of reach of the road houses, she made camp at night-time beside the trail,
and slept the deep warm sleep of the outdoor North. A hole in the snow for a bed, a few fir branches for a matress, and her Arctic dog-ropes for bedspreads, she lay herself down to sleep, alone; and at grey dawn she was up and off again. Not many women could have done it, but this woman did
it, and suffered nothing more serious than the loss of a few pounds weight
in her two months on the winter trail.

Confusion Followed—Some Claim

Claim One God In Three Persons.

London, August
17.—Pastor Russell
addressed the London Tabernacle congregation twice to-day. We report
one of his discourses, from the text, "To us there is one God, the Father,—and one
Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Corinthians 8:6.

The Pastor declared that the confusion which has
rent the Christian Church into hundreds of sects has come through neglect of the Bible—a cause not generally recognized. Creed clashings are the direct result of the serious errors contained in all creeds.

No heathen idol is so horrible as that which the most intelligent Christian people have portrayed with the pen, purporting to represent the Almighty and His attitude toward men. We have misrepresented our Creator as worse in His purposes than the vilest of humanity. Why delay?
If Jehovah be God, let us worship
Him. If the horrible Baal of the Dark Ages be no longer our God, let us destroy his creed images and forget them.

Emperor Constantine's Nicean Creed.

After the Church had forgotten the Master's declaration that His Twelve Apostles would constitute the foundation stones of the New Jerusalem,
they began to recognize their bishops
as apostolic. They overlooked the fact that God's statement that Judas' place would be filled by another intimated particularly that there would be no successors to The Twelve.
Judas' real successor was St. Paul.
Bible Students now see that the eleven Apostles, before being confirmed in Apostleship by the Pentecostal blessing, erred in choosing Matthias,
whom God merely ignored.

Gradually the bishops rose to power
as God's inspired oracles. Proportionately, The Twelve lost their influence. It was easier to take the word of the bishops than to search the Scriptures. Thus Bible study greatly declined during the second and third centuries, and disputes between Christians and Greek philosophers led some of the bishops to extremes. Not only did they maintain the Bible teaching that Jesus was the Son of God, and became man in order to redeem mankind; but some went further, and claimed that He was the Heavenly Father Himself, who had come down to earth and died.

In their anxiety to overwhelm the Greek skeptics, these Christian teachers unwittingly involved themselves in absurdities. Gradually the trinitarian mystery was advanced; and the mystification of saying that God was His own Son, the Lord Jesus His

and some deep sleep of the outdoor North. A hole in the snow for a bed, a few fir branches for a mattress, and her Arctic dog-ropes for bedspreads, she lay herself down to sleep, alone; and at grey dawn she was up and off again. Not many women could have done it, but this woman did it, and suffered nothing more serious than the loss of a few pounds weight in her two months on the winter trail.

Strange honeymoon trips sometimes fall to the lot of northern brides. A newly-wedded couple at Whitehorse wished to go to Dawson, their home-to-be. But they were too late in the season to catch the last steamer up the Yukon, and for a month they waited in Whitehorse. When the first snow came they set out for home by the overland route. A strange bridal outfit it was; dogs, and grub-box, and a sled big enough for two; and an arduous bridal tour ahead of them, via the winter Yukon trail. But they had a good time. The weather was not too sharp, the going was good, and the numerous road houses along the Dawson train made convenient stopping places. When they reached Dawson they declared that they had not had a dull moment or an uncomfortable experience, and that dog-sled wedding trips in the North were good.

Lobster Twine.

A man who had wondered what lobster twine was found the answer very simple. It is a fine quality, stout twine an eighth of an inch in diameter, made of manila hemp and originally intended for making the netted part of lobster pots. Lobster twine has come also to be used on board vessels, both sail and steam, for serving ropes, for whipping ropes, including ropes even of wire, and for various other purposes for which a stout, durable twine of this size might prove useful. There is probably more lobster twine used now on vessels than for the purpose for which it was first made.

urther, and claimed that He was the Heavenly Father Himself, who had come down to earth and died.

In their anxiety to overwhelm the Greek skeptics, these Christian teachers unwittingly involved themselves in absurdities. Gradually the trinitarian mystery was advanced; and the mystification of saying that God was His own Son, the Lord Jesus His own Father, and the Holy Spirit another person and yet the same person, appealed to people who delight to reverence most what they do not understand. Thus to-day, when questions are asked respecting the trinity—how one could be three, and three one—the answer given which satisfies the ignorant is, Mystery!

But the Bible makes no mystery of the matter. It never mentions the trinity. The one text (1 John 5:7) seeming faintly to support the thought is now admitted by all scholars to be an interpolation, dating from about the seventh century. The Revised Version shows quite distinctly the reading of earlier manuscripts.

"To Us There Is One God"

The Pastor then explained every text in both Old and New Testaments used as a proof-text supporting the trinitarian mystery, and convinced his hearers that these texts are misapplied. He quoted the Explicit statement from the Old Testament, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one God," and that from the New Testament, used as his text for this discourse.

Pastor Russell then showed that, according to our Lord's own teaching, the oneness, or harmony, between the Father and Himself resulted from our Lord's ignoring His own will, to do the Father's will. Our Lord exhorted His disciples to have the same will, spirit—the Holy Spirit—the disposition to do the Father's will.

Our Redeemer, formerly known as the Logos, was the beginning and the End of the Divine direct creation. So the Greek reads, "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with the God, and the Logos was a God. The same was in the beginning with the God. By Him were all things made that were made, and without Him was not one thing made."—John 1:1-3.

The Pastor then related the history of the Council of Nice. Constantine called a council of all the bishops—about one thousand—to settle certain doctrinal differences, of which our subject of discussion was one. Only 384 bishops came. After discussing the subject for months, they submitted it to the Emperor, who decided that the Nicene Creed was the Christian faith. Thus the trinitarian mystery was enshrined by a heathen emperor unbaptized—not even sprinkled.

TURKS ARE DEFIANT.

Army at Adrianople Is Not Being Withdrawn.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(Can. Press)—The situation between Bulgaria and Turkey is becoming critical. Prince Said Halim, the Turkish grand vizier, admits that the Turks have occupied Demotica, 25 miles south of Adrianople, and other strategic points on the right bank of the Maritza River, but he explains this was done only for the protection of the railway which runs along the right bank of the stream. Said Halim denies that the Turks have occupied Dedegatch, the terminus of the railroad on the Gulf of Enos, or that they are advancing on Gumuljina, about 25 miles to the northwest.

The Porte clearly has not the slightest intention to abandon Adrianople, where Enver Bey has 250,000 troops, and where the number soon will be increased to 400,000. Despite official denials, it appears only too probable that the Turks are projecting, if they have not already begun, the advance against Bulgaria, a note of protest against which the Bulgarian Government presented to the foreign legations at Sofia Sunday. This note said the Turks had advanced to a point 45 miles west of the Maritza River, and were marching toward Kirjali and Gumuljina.

The populace of Athens gave King Constantine a tremendous ovation on his return to the capital today.

Tries to Kill Wife.

KINGSTON, Aug. 18.—(Special).—During the severe hot spell today, Martin Byrne, a prominent farmer of Howe Island, went suddenly insane. He made an attempt to kill his wife with a butcher knife. He grabbed the knife off the table and chased her around the room, but she was able to dodge him and get out of the room, and made her escape. After making the attack on his wife he suddenly disappeared. Armed with a revolver, Constable Smith and a posse of men went after him, and, finding him, he was overpowered and arraigned before Justice of the Peace George Hunter and committed to jail for ten days to be medically examined.

Must Muzzle Dogs.

SARNIA, Aug. 18.—(Special).—So many complaints have reached the police of children being bitten by dogs in various parts of the town that the mayor has proclaimed that all dogs running around without muzzles will be seized and shot. In addition to the five dollar dog tax this hits the owners of canines pretty hard.

Little Boy Dies of Sunstroke.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—(Special).—The 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schipping of Bridgeport suffered a sunstroke at noon today and died before Dr. Huehnbergard, who was hastily summoned, could reach home.

Innovation Made in Hospital.

KINGSTON, Aug. 18.—(Special).—Kingston General Hospital now has both male and female nurses. The need for male nurses has been felt for some time. The hospital is filled to overflowing with patients.

As for paper fasteners, a touring actor writes to point another of their utilities: "There is, at times, in a small company especially, a scarcity of starched linen. And shirts, like King John's treasure, get lost or mislaid in the wash. You are playing a dude part, say, with naught but a flannel shirt to go with your dress coat. Take a sheet of note paper or foolscap, prod it under your vest, and where the central stud should be—insert a round headed brass paper fastener!" Necessity mothers invention.—The

"BLIND LEADERS OF THE BLIND"

These Words Apply to Pastor
Russell and Others, He Says.

Ministers Have Deceived the People Respecting the Bible Teachings—
But They Were Themselves Deceived, Hence Not Willfully Guilty
—Courage Necessary—Otherwise
Many Will Fall Into Unbelief.

PASTOR RUSSELL

London, August 10.—Pastor Russell addressed the London Tabernacle congregation twice to-day. We report his discourse from the text, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."—Matthew 15:14.

The Pastor said: How stupidly blind we have all been respecting our Father's Words!

We have believed human traditions and neglected the Scriptures, until the Church as a whole has become thoroughly puzzled respecting everything religious. All are out of the way of Truth, lost in the fog of human superstition and error, guided thither, as St. Paul foretold, by "doctrines of demons."—Timothy 4:1.

The duty of the hour is to get back into harmony with God, and to obtain true light upon His Word. As the Master predicted, the whole world has been intoxicated with the false doctrines which Satan gradually introduced during the Dark Ages. (Revelation 17:2.) Some were crazy drunk, to the extent of persecution; some were stupidly drunk.

Like drunken people, said the Pastor, we confused good and bad. In one breath, we told of the Love of God. In another we painted this God of Love as deliberately arranging, before creating humanity, that billions should be born in sin, misshapen in iniquity; and that after a few short years full of trouble the vast majority should be turned over to fire-proof demons, to be tortured throughout eternity.

Satan's Great Success

Pastor Russell reminded his hearers that the Master styled Satan the father of lies. Satan's first great lie misled and murdered our first parents by inducing Mother Eve to disbelieve God's words, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." Satan contradicted the Almighty, saying, "Ye shall not surely die"—cannot die, ye are immortal.

Satan has impressed this falsehood upon the whole world. While in fulfillment of God's Word people die, Satan has brought in the deceptive theory that they have really become more alive than ever, and merely have gone elsewhere to live.

Thus, contrary to all Scripture, mankind have come to believe that at death the saintly go to Heaven, and all others go either to Hell or Purgatory. The plain, common-sense statement of the Bible is ignored—that all, good and bad, old and young, go to Sheol; Hades, the tomb. Thus the Bible teaching that Jesus' redemptive work assures all a resurrection from the dead is made

What This Sectional Firepot Means to You

These are some of the advantages of the Sunshine Furnace. Our agent will be pleased to show you others, or write for booklet.

The "Sunshine" has a straight-sided semi-steel firepot, extra heavily ribbed and made in two sections. The two sections allow for contraction and expansion—which prevents cracking. The heavy ribs and semi-steel give extra strength and added radiating surface. Ashes cannot adhere to the straight sides which assures an all-over clear fire. This means the greatest heat from the fuel consumed.

and all others go either to Hell or Purgatory. The plain, commonsense statement of the Bible is ignored—that all, good and bad, old and young, go to Sheol, Hades, the tomb. Thus the Bible teaching that Jesus' redemptive work assures all a resurrection from the dead is made null and void from Satan's lie.

Immortality in Christ

The Pastor then demonstrated conclusively from Scripture that immortality is a hope, not a possession. Man was not created immortal; but the life given him was conditional upon his obedience to his Creator's commands. This is indicated by God's threat that disobedience would bring death—cessation of life. St. Paul's argument is that positive assurance of everlasting light was not given until Christ "brought immortality and life to light through the Gospel."—2 Timothy 1:10.

Immortality is a quality of life thus far possessed by Jehovah, God and by His Son our Lord Jesus Christ. The hope of the Church is to attain the promised "glory, honor and immortality" in the First Resurrection. The hope for the non-elect world is that of everlasting life, the same as that given to the angels—to all mankind who will, during the Millennial Age, come into harmony with the Messianic Kingdom. Those who, after fullest opportunity for recovery from sin and death conditions, will not render obedience to the Divine arrangement, will be everlastingly destroyed.

This Bible presentation of the matter—that God's proposition is life or death—we are beginning to see is most reasonable, most logical, said Pastor Russell. Furthermore, His proposition is that when His Plan shall have been completed, none shall have life who will not have it in perfection. He desires not mental, moral and physical degeneration in His Kingdom.

As a result of the permission of sin and death, God's Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power will be more clearly seen by both angels and men. Until we realize the Absolute Justice of God in allowing our race to go down into death and in sending His Son to die for us, paying the redemption price of Adam's sin, we could not see so clearly the depths of Divine Wisdom and Love.

The resurrection will be a stupendous expression of Divine Power. Resurrection involves no absurdities, as Scripturally seen. The Bible proposes for both Church and world a resurrection of the soul of the being. But to each class, as St. Paul declares, "God gives a body as it hath pleased Him."

However, this did not have such a detractant effect on progress as might be supposed. The holes were shortened and the powder became a mere trace but the shots could be fired frequently and that made up for a great deal.

Progress was about 17 feet a day.
As the men left the city proper behind and approached the mountain with the consequent heavier earth covering on the workings the holes were increased in depth and progress by three feet a day.

This Montreal tunnel in one sense,
holds the key to the operation of a considerable portion of the Canadian Northern transcontinental line. From that eastern metropolis to Port Arthur this company's line stretches almost
as the crow flies, when the points
touched are taken into consideration,
to Port Arthur on Lake Superior, the present eastern terminus of Canadian Northern Western lines which extend for 5,000 miles through the great Rainy Lake playground country to Winnipeg and beyond to the principal points
of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. From Edmonton a Canadian Northern line is building through the Yellowhead Pass and the valleys of the Fraser and North Thompson rivers
to Port Mann and Vancouver. That eastern portion—1000 miles—has been laid out and is being built with an eye single to the rapid transportation of traffic both passenger and freight.
Everywhere possible anything that would be liable to contribute delays in the future have been eliminated.
Grade crossings with other roads are conspicuously absent, as a direct result of this policy and the gradients
throughout the whole transcontinental
have been kept down rigidly to a high standard, or up to a high standard whichever is preferred. This was done in order that the traffic might be handled swiftly on short, or long, hauls from the east to the west. In furthering that policy, the Canadian Northern in Montreal are giving very close attention to terminal facilities for the handling of freight. The tunnel will be the company's short, direct route for trains from the sorting yards
outside to the distributing tracks
down in the city's business district.
And of course there will be close connection with the lines of the Harbor Commission at the wharves where the ocean shipping is handled.

The work on the tunnel will be accordingly pushed forward with the utmost vigour in order that these advantages may be enjoyed by the Canadian Northern just as soon as humanly possible. If the statement of the builders is supported by the speedy work the men have been doing
on this work during the past year, the bore should be through this year.
The task of enlarging the original heading to the full size, as already pointed out, has commenced. There seems to be no reason now why the tunnel should not be completed by the middle of next year and it is noteworthy that finishing of this terminal project has been timed, and it is being rushed to coincide with the completion of its transcontinental line across Canada, from Quebec and Montreal on the east to Vancouver on the Pacific Coast.

A story of Wagner known to very few is brought to the light by the Vossische Zeitung. When the composer was in a really merry mood, the right
nood for story telling, he used to say that, being in Berlin on a very hot summer's day and finding himself in the Donhoffplatz, he summoned one of the first class droschki's that were still fairly numerous at that time and told the driver where to go. His destination was at the very farthest point of a district within which only the lowest fare could be demanded.

It struck Wagner immediately that his driver was taking a very affecting leave of one of his fellows, as though he were starting on a life or death
journey. "Goodby, William," he said;
"we shan't see each other again for a long time."

After the carriage had rattled on for a good while it came suddenly to a standstill. The driver got down from his box on the right hand side, opened the carriage door and banged it to again; then he went round to the left side and repeated the performance.
climbed up on to his box and resumed
the journey. At the end of the drive Wagner asked him what this dumb-crambo show meant. The driver, with a sly look, made answer: "I just wanted to bamboozle my old nag. He would never have believed that the whole drive was for a minimum fare and would have refused to go on. But by banging the doors I got him to imagine that one fare had got out and another got in."

Wagner laughed heartily over this explanation, and the driver, in spite of his greed, over which the composer
made very merry in his letters, realized the handsome tip on which he had been speculating.—London Standard.

Ontario Has Best Apples.

Ontario has been awarded the sweepstake at the Cleveland Exhibition of the International Apple Shippers' Association which carries with it the President's Cup, as the best apple-growing Province or State on the North American Continent.

Ontario won first in its own class,
where it was grouped with Nova Scotia,
Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The Ontario exhibit was only collected on Monday, shipped on Tuesday, and carried the prizes off on Wednesday. Thirty varieties were shown —fifteen winter apples, five summer and ten fall. In regard to the summer apples allowance was made for the early season.

The cup is awarded by Mr. Ed.
Loomis, of New York, President of the Association, and is open for annual competition.

Ravages of New Canal.

Acres upon acres of the finest fruit
growing land in the Niagara fruit belt
will have to be abandoned and turned over to the Government for the New Welland Ship Canal, according to the plan just registered in the Lincoln County office.

The right-of-way at some points is half a mile in width, and at no place is it less than 800 feet wide. At the lake front 1,500 feet out in the lake is claimed for harbor purposes. The canal cuts through the village of Homer,
where a number of the old landmarks and buildings will be removed. The outline just misses the new Anglican Church now in course of erection. Here the width of the right of way extend-to one-half mile, owing to the location of a big lock, waste weir and side channel.

The Castle Comedy

By THOMPSON BUCHANAN

Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

To the Frenchman, defeated now at every turn, with his last card of luck played out, it was the time for utter despair. Dejectedly he turned from Sir John and started toward the chair beside the table near the center of the room. As he moved he thrust one hand carelessly into the pocket of his coat—the coat once worn by Jacques Fournay, the spy.

May Percy, watching his face as only a loving woman watches, caught the sudden lightning look of joy that flashed upon it and was as quickly gone. With his eyes he told her to come to him, and, understanding, she began to glide slowly, cautiously toward the chair.

Sir John, fumbling at the panel, saw none of the byplay. The Frenchman was directly behind him now, still moving toward the chair.

"I hope his wound does not trouble monsieur extremely," ventured St. Croix over his right shoulder as he edged away. By this time the girl was close to him.

"Ah, mademoiselle," he exclaimed aloud, "you have dropped your handkerchief—permit me." Then, as their hands met over the dainty bit of lace, the girl felt her fingers pressed with sudden ardor.

"Trust me," he whispered low, and in a moment was away, bowing with mere politeness. Still, Sir John, angry at being baffled, struggled desperately with the panel. Now the Frenchman was turned that way.

"Yes," he said, "I tried only to disarm monsieur, but he was violent, and," with his inimitable shrug, "I was forced to wound him slightly." The prisoner's tone expressed just a passing regret at having been compelled to perform a small, disagreeable duty.

"Lying comes easy to Frenchmen," blurted Sir John at the panel.

"And one must lie to catch a liar," retorted the other, "but—eh bien! as the French say—I'm glad the little comedy is played out."

The Englishman looked surprised.

"Comedy played out?" he sneered, with British candor, "Not till you're hanged."

"I spoke of this comedy," said Dubarre, smiling with quiet amusement, sure in the consciousness of something yet to come.

Sir John turned toward him, puzzled now.

"I don't see that you have cause for laughter."

"Sir John does not see everything," answered the old dancing master gently, "but it is just as I have said." He unbuttoned his coat, took from the inside pocket the newspaper containing the story about "French Percy," and held it toward Sir John.

"Will monsieur read? Possibly this may explain many things."

French Percy." This order is to be considered a pass through all lines and is to serve as a requisition in case anything is needed by the bearer. All soldiers will see that it is duly honored. It will be shown only in case of grave necessity.

WELLINGTON,
General Commanding.

Up and down, back and forth, before the door of the waiting chamber paced Captain Thorncliffe and Sir Henry Percy, laboring in earnest argument.

"You, Captain Thorncliffe, you have fought the French, you have bled for England, yet you give such counsel. I cannot understand it."

Captain Thorncliffe dropped his hand with light touch on the old baronet's arm before replying seriously: "And believe me, Sir Henry, that is the very reason I advise you to permit his escape. The fighters are not the haters, Sir Henry."

The older one shook off the restraining hand angrily.

"But," he protested, "this man humbled you and the British arms in outrageous fashion. Do you forget the stealing of the headquarters papers that early morning in the Spanish pass?"

On the instant flashed back the soldier's question, "When came it the part of an English gentleman to bear malice against a gallant enemy?"

Sir Henry's face grew hard at the re-

duke. His hands began to clench and unclench rapidly. He was working fast into a characteristic rage.

"Your duty, Captain Thorncliffe—" "Will be in nowise evaded by letting this man go," broke in the soldier.

"He is counted one of the dangerous men in the French army."

"He is your cousin, a brave gentleman, here on private business and practically your guest," was the retort.

"He is an enemy to England, the minion of the Corsican spawn and practically a spy. Don't presume to teach me my duty, sir," roared the head of the Percys, advancing with threatening fist upon the soldier. But the man who had stood before the English one's anger. Instead—calm, contemptuous, accusing—he faced the old man down.

"Your cousin disclosed himself to defend your daughter's honor, Sir Henry Percy, and, that done, he fought no more, though he might easily have got away. You seem to have forgotten that."

Sir Henry stood silent, overwhelmed with argument, too angry for coherent speech. With increase of the Percy stubbornness Thorncliffe's temper had been rising steadily; but now, fighting hard, he kept sufficient self control to resume his quiet, convincing argument. He knew that behind that door he guarded two men, his friends, enemies to the death, faced each other before the woman they both loved. The door of heavy oak let through no sound. What was going forward within he could but surmise, only he knew there would be a tragedy should Sir Henry in his present mood cross the threshold or any one from within come forth. And so for the life of a brave enemy he had come to love the gallant English gentleman fought hard with his friends.

"Sir Henry"—the question came forth sharp and straight—"If Colonel Lataple were not in love with your daughter would you wish to see him meet a felon's end?"

That shot struck home. The father's

"I was mad, Thorncliffe—mad!" he cried. "The boy is a Percy. That was the reason. Do you think a Percy would give her up while he lives?"

Thorncliffe took a turn along the little passage and back again. It was the life of a brave man he wanted. The Frenchman must look out for his own love affairs, and besides his latent racial prejudice made the soldier feel that there was some justice in the father's words. Accordingly the pleader's next question was put carefully.

"Suppose—suppose, Sir Henry, Mistress May should marry Wilmerding? The Percys have two qualities—courage and honor. Your French cousin has proved that he possesses both. Marry her to Wilmerding tonight."

"Tonight!" murmured Sir Henry blankly. "I told him, Dubarre, Percy, that, but I did not mean it. Tonight!"

"Tonight," insisted Thorncliffe. "It must be tonight. The soldiers you sent for should be here now. Besides I recognized Wellington's spy, Fournay, in one of your French visitors yesterday. Now I know why he was here. Marry her to Wilmerding tonight, for not until she is married will the French Percy leave England. She will be safe from him then—and—God help her!" muttered the soldier.

Sir Henry Percy drew a long breath of relief; then, with sudden feeling, gripped the soldier's hands impulsively.

"Thank you, Thorncliffe—thank you. You have kept me worthy of my name. I'll start for Sir Harvey Johnston's at once and drive over tonight with the bishop. You—ah—you," with a wise nod, "you arrange things. And—may the good God speed the boy!" he ended softly.

Within the waiting chamber the self-confessed spy stood laughing with cynical contempt at the girl he had won and the man he had conquered. Mistress Percy, the proud gentlewoman, overcome at the disclosure of her lover, still sat beside the table, her face buried in her arms. Once she had looked up, but the sight of the contemptuous, sneering face of the spy bitterly baiting Sir John Wilmerding quickly brought her head down again.

The gentleman in disguise the girl had loved. Her hero cousin of Napoleon's guard, risking his life gayly in a gallant adventure and offering it gladly for her, she had adored. But this spy, by his own statement—this sneak, who laughingly confessed to trailing her hero cousin for blood money and loudly regretted fighting for her because it might have cost him the price of "French Percy's" life—she shrank from him in horror. Now at the thought of his kisses, at his every speech, the proud girl writhed with shame and loathing. There could be no mistake. She felt sure of that now, for not even the reckless, desperate "French Percy" could have dared the risk she had heard this man boastingly take.

"I've fooled too long already with a country bumpkin over his pastoral love affairs. Call Captain Thorncliffe. He will identify Wellington's own hand. A nice thing it would be to report to the commander in chief that the asinine stupidity of a country militia officer allowed the most dangerous scout in the French army to slip through our fingers."

"By God," roared Wilmerding, fin-nervously and at the end he was trembling, yet the big blis throughout showed brave and f

"Dad," she began, and just the trembling mouth made the shake ever so slightly, though remained steadfast—"dad, you surprised to see me here. I confess something to you, dad, because I thought that man—my cousin St. Croix, dad"—and a voice was proud and full—"could have kept me from him. But a Percy can't love money spy, dad, and if you will forgive me I'll—I'll"—she in a wild jumble of words and "I'll marry John any time you From Sir Henry there burst rushing sigh of relief.

"Then tomorrow it is, coz!" he gathering the sobbing girl in his arms. "I'll bring the bishop over for Harvey's tonight, and your of the happiest man in England."

Without so much as a glance father and daughter or at the man had won the girl he loved the married and walked from the room, he passed Captain Thorncliffe, muttered, "Merci, monsieur, but rather you had not so paid the debt."

"But, worshipful sir, when a is so hard to meet, what is a po of an outlaw bent on matrimony Jack Ketch can't tie that knot."

Sir Henry Percy, seated beside lord bishop in the coach, gave voluntary snort of laughter at the ed highwayman's apologetic. answered the old dancing master gently, "but it is just as I have said." He unbuttoned his coat, took from the inside pocket the newspaper containing the story about "French Percy" and held it toward Sir John.

"Will monsieur read? Possibly this may explain many things."

Wilmerding came over quickly to take the paper. He stood beside the table on the Frenchman's right to read it. May Percy, eager, anxious, had stolen to his other side. As Sir John read, her eyes questioned her lover's, but his quick smile of encouragement told her only to be brave and wait.

Sir John looked up from his reading. "Good! Good!" he cried. "We English can always fool you dull French spies. The government is awake."

"And, as usual, when awake it played the fool," broke in the Frenchman bitterly. "This, now"—He took the paper from Sir John. "It is safe to wager that 'French Percy' will fail in this, his last desperate undertaking, or, if he should get to the castle, will certainly be captured. The place is now being watched." The reader cast the paper down angrily. "Fools! Idiots! That's what spoiled it."

"Spoiled it?" questioned Sir John.

"Yes," blurted Dubarre, angry now clear through, "spoiled it, I said. Send a man down here to watch, then publish stuff."

"What's this? What do you mean?" interrupted the slower Englishman, while even Mistress Percy began to show some signs of uneasiness.

"Mean?" ejaculated Dubarre. "I mean that while I fooled with a country bumpkin over his pastoral love affair because of this paper 'French Percy' slipped through my fingers."

Sir John fell back to gaze at him in angry, blank amazement. "'French Percy' gone!" he blustered. "All know you are the renegade himself."

The other had recovered his temper by this time. Now he shrugged his shoulders.

"Only when it pleased me. I'm no more 'French Percy' than I am Gaston Dubarre." And with his old mocking laugh he looked at the two astonished faces before him. May Percy fell away from him with a little cry of horror.

"Who? What?" was all Sir John could mutter stupidly.

The self confessed stranger drew himself up and bowed to them both deeply. "Jacques Fournery, the government's private emissary, at your service," he said.

"Jacques Fournery! Wellington's spy? Stuff!" cried Sir John.

Mistress Percy looked for a moment at the Frenchman, fright and amazement in her eyes, then sank into the chair and buried her face in her arms upon the table. The acknowledged spy appeared nettled. He drew a small case out of his coat pocket and extracted therefrom a bit of oiled paper, which he spread out and offered to the Englishman.

"Read this, sir, and change your mind." Then as Sir John glanced at it he added aloud, "Mistress Percy might like to hear."

The girl who had rested in the man's arms so few minutes before heard Sir John read of her lover:

This is to certify that the bearer, Jacques Fournery, is a faithful, loyal and highly efficient officer in the British service. All soldiers and loyal subjects to whom he may appeal are hereby commanded to do everything in their power to aid him in whatever way he may desire, especially in the matter of the capture of the notorious outlaw and spy lish gentleman fought hard with his friends.

"Sir Henry"—the question came forth sharp and straight—"if Colonel Latapie were not in love with your daughter would you wish to see him meet a felon's end?"

That shot struck home. The father's eyes opened wide.

"By my soul, Captain Thorncliffe, you take strange liberties!"

The soldier diplomat went on, unheeding the interruption:

"And yet he is a brave gentleman and asked you for her fairly."

"Sir, I'll—How do you know that?" roared Sir Henry, taken quite off his guard.

Thorncliffe tried hard not to show his triumph.

"Because," he said simply, "Latapie is a French officer and a Percy. Besides a man does not often throw away his life needlessly for a woman he does not love. And—and"—as he said this the pleader watched the old baronet carefully—"she loves him much, Sir Henry."

Mistress Percy's father fairly exploded in rage and sorrow.

"What! What! My daughter—my little May—marry a Frenchman, a Johnny Crepaud, a frog eater! Yes—yes—that is what the scoundrel asked me. I'll own up, Thorncliffe. I had decided to allow him to escape because—because he is such a gallant rascal, and—and"—with a burst of family pride—"after all, he is a Percy. You can't hurt the old stock, Thorncliffe, even with the weakening strain of the French blood. But marry May—my little May—take my only child over the water! Not that, Thorncliffe, not that. No one could ask that." The stern old voice trembled and broke.

A lump in his own throat, the soldier ventured to put his hand again, this time almost affectionately, on the shoulder of the older man.

"But why, old friend," he questioned gently, "merely because your cousin loves your daughter should you let the hangman's noose dangle over one branch of your family tree? Is that quite fair?"

The head of the house laughed aloud in sudden revulsion of feeling.

will identify Wellington's own hand. A nice thing it would be to report to the commander in chief that the asinine stupidity of a country militia officer allowed the most dangerous scout in the French army to slip through our fingers."

"By God," roared Wilmerding, fingering his pistol, "if it were not for the slight chance I'd kill you now!"

The spy laughed in his face.

"And be hanged for it later. But I tell you the little chap of the pair here yesterday, the one with the gray eyes, was St. Croix. Now"—impatently—"call Thorncliffe."

Sir John walked over to the big door and knocked, and as he did so the spy stepped suddenly close to the table.

"Mistress Percy"—A last unacknowledged hope shining in her eyes, she looked up.

"I'm sorry for the part I had to play with you!"

A gasp, and the dark head sank again as the girl burst into shuddering sobs.

"Come, Hal, come. And you, too, Sir Henry. Come block this French trickster's game. The scoundrel claims now to be not St. Croix at all, but some spy—Fournery. See—see the pass he has forged or stolen." And Sir John Wilmerding, at the door, thrust the paper into the hands of the astonished Captain Thorncliffe.

Dumb from amazement, Sir Henry Percy followed Captain Thorncliffe into the room. At the sight of his daughter sobbing over the table the old baronet was about to cry out, but the soldier, with a quick, warning grasp, restrained him. Smiling and easy, the spy bowed to them.

"What's this? What do you mean? Who are you anyhow?" blurted Sir Henry.

The prisoner bowed jauntily a second time.

"As my pass reads—Jacques Fournery, Wellington's spy, at your service. Captain Thorncliffe should know that signature."

After one glance at the self confessed Fournery the soldier had given all his attention to the pass. Now he looked up.

"It's genuine," he said. "There can be no doubt of that."

"And stolen, too, I wager," broke in Wilmerding angrily.

"'Tis scarcely possible, Jack. I saw this pass written in Spain. I recognize it by a crossed out word."

"And this fellow is"—gasped Wilmerding.

"He must be Fournery."

For quite a minute no one moved. The spy looked straight into the eyes of Thorncliffe and Thorncliffe straight into the eyes of the spy. But what each saw in the other was for those two only. Then impulsively the Frenchman thrust out his hand:

"Monsieur—captain!"

Thorncliffe turned his back.

"I think," he said slowly, "your trail, Fournery, leads toward France. Sir Henry Percy, in accordance with that pass, will give you a horse. You may catch your man before he reaches the seacoast."

With the first sound of her father's voice Mistress May had sprung to her feet. The Percy pride, strong in all the line, leaped to her rescue. Throughout Thorncliffe's identification of the spy she stood straight, with head held high, facing her father, and, although now and then her hands at her sides moved swer. Yes, there was the sentence, "Who giveth this woman to this man?"

And, thinking of the morrow and what it meant to him, Sir Henry from the darkness called forth in his deepest voice, "I do, with all my heart."

The slender bride gave a little sobbing cry of joy.

For the rest of the ceremony her answers were nods and indistinct murmurs through happy tears. It was the most solemn service of the bishop's life.

"And would you like a certificate?" he asked when John and Mary had plighted their troth.

"Certainly," replied the gallows bird groom.

By the dim light of the stars—for the highwayman in his first attack had smashed the carriage lamps—the certificate was made out and signed. Naught remained but to insert the full names of the contracting parties. The bishop held the goose quill poised expectantly. The old baronet was leaning forward in his interest.

"Put in," said the highwayman, "John Percy Latapie, vicomte de St. Croix, and May Percy, daughter of Sir Henry Percy, his wife."

Then, lighting the tension that followed, the moon rushed out with sudden boldness from behind the clouds to show the father and daughter standing face to face.

"Dad, dear dad!" Her arms outstretched toward him, her eyes big and soft with love, the wayward girl made her tender appeal. "Forgive me, dad!"

Sir Henry Percy stood white, silent, too dazed for speech.

"I could not give him up when he offered his life for me, dad."

"May—my little girl—married to a Frenchman?" The old man murmured it slowly, incredulously to himself.

The girl dared a step nearer, her husband and the bishop looking on.

"Not a Frenchman, dad, but Cousin Jack Percy's grandson, a Percy straight and true," she whispered.

Her father seemed suddenly to come to himself. "How dared you? How knew you he was not Fournery?" he cried. "Is he St. Croix?"

The girl laughed low, happily.

"Fie! I believe you knew it all the time. Captain Thorncliffe told Ethel and she told me," she said. "A lieutenant of cavalry rode up after you had started for Sir Harvey's. He brought us the news that 'French Percy' had been shot by his men on outpost yesterday morn at daybreak and in proof showed a ring, the St. Croix seal, taken from the clothes of the dead man. I recognized it as the one M. Dubarre had sometimes worn. See, here it is!" She held the ring toward her father. "I had to keep the horrid big seal in my mouth all during the wedding to change my voice," she ended slyly.

"And yōū got away," questioned Sir Henry, still angry, but not knowing what to do.

She went on with the utmost meekness: "I had your pet hunter at the lodge gate, sir; a long cloak on the saddle, pistols and a dagger in the holsters"—archly—"I believe you promised 'French Percy' those? Cousin Jack Percy's grandson was waiting in our hut for me. And, dad, dad!"—she ended it with a tender rush—"we were so afraid we'd miss you and the bishop and after so much trouble I'd had spoiling your pistols too."

For the first time since the wedding St. Croix spoke.

"And had we missed you, Sir Henry,

ALEXANDER POPE.

He Was Considered In His Day the Greatest of All Poets.

Few men of our day comprehend the commanding intellectual position held by Pope during the latter period of his life and for a long period after his death. There has never been anything approaching it in the history of our own literature or of any literature. In the opinion of vast numbers he was not merely the greatest English poet of his time, but the greatest English poet of all time; not merely the greatest of English poets, but the greatest of all poets that ever existed. Even those who took the lowest estimate of his character—and of such there was no small number—entertained the highest admiration for his genius. They expressed themselves with an extravagance of praise which astounds the modern reader, too apt to go to the other extreme of unwarranted depreciation. They did not content themselves with according him mere greatness; to him belonged perfect greatness. It was assumed by his friends as a matter of course; it was conceded by the indifferent and even by those personally hostile. As one illustration out of many, a poem appeared in 1733, entitled "An Epistle to the Little Satyrst of Twickenham." It was full of the severest reflections upon Pope's character. It spoke of him as an object of universal scorn. It charged him with being under the influence of ill nature, spleen, envy, malice and avarice. Yet it admitted that not only in early youth did he surpass others, but that his powers had increased with advancing years, Till to perfection you at last arriv'd Which none have e'er excell'd that ever liv'd.

This was no sentiment of a solitary individual. It was a widespread feeling at the time, and it did not die out suddenly. If anything, the belief increased in strength after Pope's death. We can get some idea of its force by the few verses summing up his character, which were immediately produced by the man against whom for a quarter of a century the poet had been directing the shafts of his satire. The year before Pope died Colley Cibber had been substituted in place of Theobald as the hero of "The Dunciad." He had every reason to feel and express the bitterest resentment against the author of the satire, so far as a nature almost absolutely free from rancor could entertain such a sentiment.—T. R. Lounsbury in Scribner's.

The Stag Hound's Scent.

Hounds with very fine noses are not and perhaps never have been too common. The hound that never loses the line, but threads his way through coverts, along roads and turns with the stag when the latter runs beside a hedge, is invaluable, and such hounds help greatly to the death of the stag. There is another quality which is invaluable and rare—the faculty of discriminating not only the scent of the quarry from that of all others, but of distinguishing the scent of the hunted animal from that of others of the same kind. When we consider how fox-hounds in a well preserved country are allowed and perhaps sometimes even encouraged to change foxes it is remarkable that they should have retained any of this quality of their stag-hound ancestors. But the fact remains that of the drafts which make up our

IDEAL PETEWAWA.

Canada's Big Manoeuvre Ground is a Remarkable Place.

Petewawa is certainly a military camp par excellence.

There are a hundred square miles all told, and a brigade division can march out in the morning and manoeuvre for days without remainder of the camp knowing by any visible sign where it is. For a military camp ground the soil is ideal because the grounds absorbs water so quickly and readily that there is scarcely any discomfort from the heaviest rain. The rain ultimately finds its way to the Ottawa river but not till it has percolated through a couple of hundred feet of fine sand. The ground is a natural filter and when it appears at the foot of the cliff it is in the form of crystal spring water, cool and pure and refreshing. It is from the many springs at the foot of the high river bank that the camp is supplied. The water is gathered into tanks and pumped into two high reservoirs at the highest point of the camp ground, and from there it is fed through a complete water service to every unit. All corps using horses are supplied with horse troughs, and each corps has its washing troughs with running water and shower baths for whoever wish to use them.

The camp ground proper though between two and three miles long is but an insignificant part of the great site. But now after some years of building it is a completely equipped camp town. Every brigade area has its telephone connection to headquarters and the whole service is linked with the civilian lines outside. Camp discipline requires the most rigid attention to sanitary laws. No filth of any kind is permitted to accumulate. All kitchen refuse is burnt daily in iron incinerators provided for the purpose. All horse manure and other refuse is carted away to a distance and burnt. Even paper is gathered up.

A very convenient peculiarity of the camping ground is the occurrence at frequent intervals of small stretches of high land. Almost invariably these are used for the tents of the brigade staffs. The brigadier's flag by day and the red masthead light by night are therefore easily discernable to any members of his command. In almost all cases, too, the brigadier's tent commands a full view of every part of the ground upon which his troops are camped.

The headquarters or office of administration is situated upon the highest point of the camp ground. It overlooks a magnificent stretch of the Ottawa river and the high Laurentian hills on the opposite side. The country is covered with small timber and the coloring in the month of June is superb. The air seems to be always clear. On lower levels the other permanent buildings are placed at convenient spots. The postal corps and telegraph companies occupy one building. The ordnance occupy another. The other buildings are devoted to the various offices necessary for running the camp.

For the amusement of the troops, the Government has provided moving pictures this year at many of the camps. At Petewawa, a moving picture theatre has been constructed, and exhibitions are nightly given between the hours of 8.30 and 9.30. The entertainments are much appreciated by the men, and, for that matter, by the officers, too. The men who operate the pictures are provided with a marquee tent in which they sleep and

I should have been forced to go back
of mine own accord to your gallows,
for I would not leave her in England
except as my wife, and Mistress May would not come unless I promised you

Sir Henry whirled on him.
"And you call what I gave 'consent'

"The bishop heard you say, 'I do,
with all my heart,'" broke in St. Croix accusingly.

"A trick!" roared Sir Henry—"a trick, that no one but—"

"Jack Percy's grandson could have executed," finished May Percy for him.

"Jack Percy's grandson—Jack Percy's grandson," he repeated musingly.
For the first time the phrase seemed to take hold of him.

"And your son now, dad," whispered
May Percy softly.

Her father glanced inquiringly toward the bishop.

"By the law of God and the church
they are man and wife, Sir Henry."

With sudden impulsiveness May Lat-aple, countess St. Croix, threw herself into her father's arms.

"And, dad, you can't hang your own son," she cried. "And he is going to leave me with you until the war is over and he can come for me again with honor."

In the clear, revealing moonlight,
over the bowed head of the girl in his arms, the chief of the Percys studied
the new heir to the line.

"Jack Percy's grandson," he muttered at last in unwilling admiration. Then the two involuntarily looked at the one both loved. The struggling Percy pride died hard. At last Sir Henry opened his arms. "Take her, boy," he said briefly.

THE END.

The Bishop's Story.

Here is a story told by the Bishop of London. When he was in Toronto recently a member of one of his audiences told him that he had heard him speak fourteen years before in London; and remembered only one thing
he said.

"He told me that fourteen years ago," said the Bishop, "I related the story of an old woman who fell from a three story window in the East-end, struck her head, and was picked up dead.

"He added that I had said I went to her neighbor and remarked: 'I am afraid Mrs. Jones was not prepared,' and that I had received this reply: 'Oh, yes; I know she was, because as she passed my window in her fall I heard her say, 'Now for a bump!' " "

kind. When we consider how foxhounds in a well preserved country are allowed and perhaps sometimes even encouraged to change foxes it is remarkable that they should have retained any of this quality of their staghound ancestors. But the fact remains that of the drafts which make up our staghound kennels some few hounds
in each do develop the faculty of holding to the line in spite of the many temptations to change, thus reverting
to the qualities of their ancestors.—T.
F. Dale in Blackwood's Magazine.

The Longest English Novel.

"Clarissa Harlowe," written by Samuel Richardson (1689-1761), and generally regarded as his masterpiece, is the longest novel in the English language.
It ran to eight volumes, and in publishing it Richardson said: "Ashamed, as I am, of the prolixity, I thought I owed
the public eight volumes in quantity for the price of seven." He knew very well that it was not a page too long for the public for which he wrote, and the result justified his faith in himself
as an author and in the public appetite, which, created by himself in the first instance by his "Pamela" (another novel of great length), grew by what it fed upon. His third work,
"Sir Charles Grandison," extended to seven volumes. "We do not," says Professor Masson, "read Richardson's novels now. These are the novels of eight to ten volumes, written in the tedious
form of letters and recording conversations and meditations in which the story creeps on inch by inch without
so much as an unexpected pistol shot or a trick of harlequin or pantaloons to relieve the attention."

Duke Wouldn't Stand It.

The Duke of Connaught is quick to nail a lie. The other day a Canadian paper received a letter which tells its own story.

From Lt.-Col. H. C. Lowther, secretary to H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught:—

"The attention of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has been called to a paragraph in The Daily Blank of June 25, headed, 'Prince Arthur is Unlucky at Cards.'

"His Royal Highness desires me to give an absolute denial to the statements contained in the said paragraph. Neither His Royal Highness himself nor Prince Arthur of Connaught were at Windsor Castle, or near it, during Ascot races, and Their Royal Highnesses never play cards for money except an occasion game of bridge for very modest stakes."

Three Capt. McNeills.

Three Capt. McNeills went to sea with their ships from Montreal the other day. Capt. McNeill, a big burly Scotchman, took the Letitia to Glasgow; Capt. McNeill, an Irishman, commanded the C.P.R. liner Montreal, which cleared for Antwerp, while the third McNeill was on the bridge of the Cunard liner Ansonia, which left for London. The three McNeills were berthed side by side in the harbor.

"Scotched."

At the recent Highlanders' camp
at Barrie, Ont., the officers allowed themselves a little liquid refreshment,
after which came the speech-making.

One young officer got up and tried to tell a story. His imitation of the Scotch brogue was, however, painful.

An old colonel rose, and looking very hard at him said, "Eh, mon, there's naething Scotch aboot ye but y'r breath!"

camp. At Petawawa, a moving picture theatre has been constructed, and exhibitions are nightly given between the hours of 8.30 and 9.30. The entertainments are much appreciated by the men, and, for that matter, by the officers, too. The men who operate the pictures are provided with a marquee tent in which they sleep and store their apparatus. They draw Government rations, eat with the sergeants' mess, and are subject to military discipline. The films exhibited include army pictures, representing the troops of Great Britain and Foreign Powers, followed by travel scenes,
and concluding with comic pictures.
The program is changed each evening.

None of the firms exhibited are of an objectionable character, but all are of good moral purport. The camp commandant is responsible that such is the case.

Plans For Peace Centenary.

The Canadian Peace Centenary is now in a position to prosecute with vigor the program recommended to it
by its delegates to the recent International Conference at New York for the discussion of methods of celebrating the hundred years of peace between the peoples of the British Empire and the United States. These recommendations chiefly have relation to two important aspects of the commemoration, the erection of visible monuments and the establishment of educational influences looking to all increase in international good-will. With regard to the former, the general feeling favored numerous monuments of identical design, on both sides of the frontier, in preference to a few very large monuments. It was held that the object was to set up emblems of good will in as many centres of population as possible. The educational efforts to be aimed at include the establishment of lectureships on Anglo-American history, based on the principle of interchange of professors;
the endowment of traveling scholarships to enable journalists and writers
to visit various English-speaking coun-

Mr. A. K. Beauvais, foreman for the Dominion Bridge Company, Montreal, which has the contract for the steel superstructure of the buildings of the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Ltd., has been in St. John, N.B., recently.

Mr. Beauvais, although yet a young man, has had an adventurous career.
He is one of the few survivors of the Quebec bridge disaster, August 30, 1907. He is bringing 30 men from Montreal, all Indians, and said they are fully as good as white men for the job, adding, "On the Quebec bridge we had seventy-nine men working. Of these, forty were from one little Indian village. And there was keen competition for a job on the Quebec

MONEY IN RAISING HEAVY DRAFTERS

The breeding of heavy draft horses is one of the most profitable branches of live stock farming. Few farmers realize the importance of size in a draft horse when put on the market, either in public or private sale. A horse that weighs less than 1,500 pounds is not considered a draft horse in any of the horse markets of the country, yet the mares kept on the ordinary farms are usually lighter than that. This accounts for the small, scrubby lot of horses that are constantly being put on the market at a loss to the breeder.

This was well illustrated at a sale of grade horses recently held at Salina, says the Kansas Industrialist. Here the horses of good size were readily bought at good prices, while some of the lighter ones could scarcely be sold at any price. There is an increasing demand for heavy draft horses in the cities in spite of the fact that many firms are using the motor truck in their delivery work. The motor truck can be used profitably only on long, heavy hauls where the roads are good and speed is essential. The motor requires good roads for its best opera-

The sire and dam of a horse are not the only points to be considered in the production of heavy drafters. The care of the colt probably will influence its growth and development as much as its breeding. Some very good horses sometimes are produced from inferior stock if they are well cared for. The horse illustrated is from the farm of the Pennsylvania Agricultural college. He is a grade Percheron and was developed by care and feeding.

tion and can be used to advantage only in the paved streets of the city or on good country roads.

The motor truck has its place on the farm. It can be used for plowing and heavy hauling, but can never replace the draft horse. If the draft horse is a permanent part of agriculture more attention should be given to its production.

There is an increasing demand for heavier horses on the farms. Deeper and better tillage must be practiced in the future, and this requires heavier machinery and more motive power. There are two ways of increasing this power. One is by increasing the number of light horses. But the most economical way is to increase the weight of the horses. This will reduce the farm labor force, will decrease the

FOR GROWERS OF TOMATOES.

Staking is Necessary if Finish of Early Fruit is a Consideration.

Whether to stake or not to stake tomatoes is a much debated subject, says a correspondent of Gardening. Like a good many others, this one will never be settled to the satisfaction of all. Where it pays one man to stake and sucker part or all of his crop another would lose money by doing so.

Many experiments are misleading because they lack the practical side. By this we mean the ability to take the crop to market and bring home the money.

We find that for the early trade it is absolutely necessary to stake our tomatoes, as we cannot sell the product from prostrate vines. It lacks the finish which is so necessary for table fruit. There are other considerations. During rainy spells the trained vine will set fruit where the other will not, and when it comes to picking the crop we gain all the time and labor lost for staking.

To us it is more a matter how to stake than any other. We have had very good results by transferring the greenhouse system outdoors. This is simply setting stakes about ten feet apart and stretching a wire over these to which the vertical strings are tied upon which the vines are hoisted. We generally have four plants between the stakes and use American twine flax. We used to stretch a bottom wire, but found it very much in the way for boxing, hence quit it and get along just as well by simply tying the twine loosely to the tomato plants near the ground.

Feeding Young Pigs.

When the pigs are large enough to eat from a trough have a low, flat trough for feeding them just a little dry feed or warm milk several times daily. During this time feed the sow liberally—in fact, have her eat all she can of slop food and produce as much milk as she will, for there is no substitute for her milk that will develop the youngster as fast. Keep them thriving every day. If you do not intend to breed the sow for a fall litter let the pigs run with her until she weans them, which will be between two and three months. If you intend to have the sow produce a fall litter let her suckle the pigs until they are eight or ten weeks old. Then remove the sow from the pigs, leaving the pigs in the pen they are accustomed to, and they will not worry as much.—National Stockman.

Sheep Improve Pastures.

A good example of what sheep will do in keeping a pasture free of weeds is shown in two pastures on the Kansas experiment station farm. One of these pastures has had sheep in it part of the time for the last five years. The weeds are practically eradicated, although no other measure has been taken to keep them out. The other pasture has had no sheep, and considerable difficulty has been met in keeping down the weeds. The old idea that sheep kill a pasture lacks any definite proof. In fact, most experience has proved that pastures continually pastured with sheep improve from year to year.

HIS QUEER SENSE OF HUMOR.

It Found Relief In Practical Jokes Upon the Clergy.

Some thirty odd years ago a young man came to New York from England (I have forgotten his name), and for a year or so he posed as a very ardent churchman. He had a mania which seemed to be the making of trouble for other people, with no particular object except that and certainly with no advantage to himself, as he very naturally remained "incog."

As illustrative, he would send out a hundred or more postal cards addressed to as many different plumbers in New York, asking them to call on a certain day, at a given hour, at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, rector of Trinity church. Another time it would be an army of bakers, and so on. On one occasion he sent invitations to a dozen of the clergy to dine with Dr. Dix on a given date. Imagine the good doctor's consternation when his unexpected guests arrived!

One of his bits of "funny" work, in which he used the name of the late Bishop Jagger, was as follows: Dr. Cornelius B. Swope was the vicar of Trinity chapel, in Twenty-fifth street, at the time, and Dr. Horatio Potter the bishop of New York. Dr. Dix had become so exasperated as hardly to know what to do, and one day he went to consult Dr. Swope and to ask his advice as to what could be done, taking with him one of the cards that he had received. On looking at it Dr. Swope said:

"I recognize that handwriting because I received a card some time ago in the same hand, which I have kept as a curiosity."

This was the card:

Cincinnati, Ohio.
Dear Cornelius—It is rumored out here that you would like to be a bishop. If this is true please let me know at once. I have great influence with Morg. Dix and will see old Potter about it, so—

If you would like to be a bishop
And with the bishops stand,
A miter on your forehead
And a crozier in your hand,
Please write me immediately. Faithfully
yours,
THOMAS JAGGAR,
Bishop of Southern Ohio.

New York became rather too "hot" for our friend shortly after that, as the police got on his track, and he disappeared. He turned up later at his old tricks in Pittsburgh, I think, where he was exposed, and I don't remember what became of him.—Rev. Dr. W. W. Holley in Living Church.

Books From Unexpected Places.

Not only art, but literature, has been produced in unexpected places. There was, for instance, Robert Bloomfield, who produced his "Farmer's Boy" while working so hard as a shoemaker (in a garret with five or six others) that he frequently had to carry a hundred lines in his head through lack of leisure to write them down. James Hogg, too, "the Ettrick Shepherd," wrote his earliest verses while tending his sheep in the Perthshire highlands. And Taylor, "the Water Poet," combined the very different offices of literary man and Thames waterman.—London Chronicle.

and better tillage must be practiced in the future, and this requires heavier machinery and more motive power. There are two ways of increasing this power. One is by increasing the number of light horses. But the most economical way is to increase the weight of the horses. This will reduce the farm labor force, will decrease the amount of equipment necessary in requiring less stable room and less harness, and the cost of feed will be lessened.

All farmers and breeders who are breeding horses for commercial purposes should replace their small mares with heavier ones. This must be done gradually by adding a few good draft mares to the herd every year and selling the poorer ones. Sometimes good colts may be reared from inferior mares by mating them to a good stallion, but better ones always will be the result of the mating of better mares to the same stallion.

Grain For Horses.

In feeding corn to a horse it had better form the noon meal, and it should be fed in the ear form. Let the night and morning meals consist of five parts of whole oats and one part of wheat bran dampened with water. A 1,200 pound horse should not have more than twelve to fourteen pounds of grain a day when working hard and may take less when idle. Feed a light amount of hay, giving the greater part of it at night, and but one or two pounds of it at noon. Always give the drinking water before feeding.

ing down the weeds. The old idea that sheep kill a pasture lacks any definite proof. In fact, most experience has proved that pastures continually pastured with sheep improve from year to year.

Cause of Spavin.

According to the Kansas Farmer, the causes of spavin are, first, hereditary predisposition; second, strain incidental to violent movements; third, by working colts when too young.

Horse Indigestion.

For a horse afflicted with chronic indigestion and an abnormally loose condition of the bowels the following treatment is recommended: Feed about one-half an ordinary ration and let it consist of five parts of whole oats and one part of wheat bran dampened with water at time of feeding. Always give the drinking water before feeding. Do not work the animal soon after a meal, but see that it is worked or abundantly exercised every day. Feed mixed clover and timothy hay or straight timothy hay and give most of it at night. Allow free access to rock salt. If the horse eats its bedding use planing mill shavings or sawdust in place of straw. After feeding in this manner for a couple of weeks, should the trouble persist, mix in the feed twice daily one tablespoonful of a mixture of two parts powdered wood charcoal and one part each of granular hyposulphite of soda, powdered nuxvomica and ground gentian root.—Farm Journal.

And Taylor, the water color painter, combined the very different offices of literary man and Thames waterman.—London Chronicle.

The Third Hand.

How often the little things in life make impressions that linger in our memories long after the larger events are forgotten! Several years ago I was making a visit in a family where there were several daughters. One of the girls brought a hat into the sewing room one morning and prepared to trim it. Before doing anything else she took a hatpin and pinned the hat firmly to her skirts at the knees, so that she had both hands free and held the ribbon and flowers in place with her left hand while she sewed them with her right.—Philadelphia North American.

It's Easy to Learn.

Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, hit on his marvelous discovery while studying and while teaching the deaf.

Professor Bell once said, apropos of this fact:

"Yes, we can learn valuable secrets from the most unlikely sources. A Persian poet, famed for his wisdom, was once asked by his king where he had learned his philosophy.

"From the blind, sire," the poet replied—"from the blind, who never advance a step until they have tried the ground."—New York Tribune.

Diamonds and Glass.

The diamond, instead of being a real solid, is a mass of atoms all in rapid and violent motion. The edge of the stone is formed of these moving molecules as well as the body. Now, glass is also made up of moving atoms, though they do not move so rapidly or so violently as the diamond atoms. When the diamond edge, therefore, is applied to the glass surface the diamond atoms drive the glass atoms out of the way and force a passage.

How Words Change.

Words undergo all sorts of changes, not so much in form as in meaning. Their forms remain traceable, but the way in which many of them shift their meanings is very interesting and remarkable. Take our common word "resentment." It now means manifestation of anger or displeasure. In its origin it meant almost precisely the opposite. It signified civil attention or recognition of a friendly act. To equivocate was at first merely to call two things by the same name, not to utter a falsehood. Hypocrite meant originally nothing but a player or actor and had no sinister meaning. Tinsel at first was made of the precious metals, and the word was in good repute till detection of repeated frauds caused its degradation. The word "admiration" once meant wonder merely. Now it also means approval and delight. There are thousands of words in English that thus have changed their signification, some for the better, some for the worse. But their forms have changed little in many cases not at all.—Portland Oregonian.

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Seasick Remedies That One Would Not Expect to Cure.

RAW HAM AND BLACK BREAD.

When You Spill a Chocolate Sundae on Your Best Frock Here's a Way to Get the Stain Out—The Latest Fashion Fad.

Dear Elsa—My thoughts this week have all been wending their way via the big steamships to "furrin lands," for really so many of my friends have deserted their native shores that very few are left on this side of the pond. Poor things! Several of them were, or, rather, are, experiencing their maiden trip, and they were very doubtful before sailing whether they would be persona grata at the court of Neptune.

You know, dear, how one's friends urge their own pet remedy for seasickness upon the tourist, but for some strange reason each one is as shy about the value of his offered cure as he is about his way of dancing the tango. And strange, too, his method is exactly the one you would not expect him to suggest.

For example, there is a social tradition among a certain smart set in New York that one of their members was cured of seasickness by living on raw ham, black bread and beer. As a result lots of would be smart women have followed in the footsteps of this scion of American aristocracy and, in the vernacular of the day, have been sadly "left."

Another of the topsy turvy cures I've heard recently was for the victims of mal de mer to tie a tight band around their waists to steady their stomachs. Now, this is a real hardship to demand of a woman when la mode is encouraging a more than Venus de Milo expansion of waist proportion, so this is probably the most unusual thing that particular recommender could think of.

One of the most abstemious men I ever knew told me he overcame the terrors of seasickness by walking the deck with a bottle of champagne under each arm and was cured by this ungodly remedy. On the other hand, a sporting man will often suggest such mild remedies as lemons and ginger ale.

The thinnest girl I have ever encountered lived for five days on hard crackers and insists that they are the only things that saved her. Some people say you must drink no water, others that you must take no soup, and many old travelers advocate nothing but toast. So, dear, you see the most popular rule this season for the almost inevitable pond affliction seems to be to do the opposite of what you would on land, but the old and tried salts' cure is that "there ain't no sich thing as a cure."

Dick has just come in and says he's heard the latest remedy a "sure tip." It's lime juice cordial. Put enough in cold water to make it taste pleasantly of the cordial and sip the beverage slowly the first thing upon awakswimming puts on her companions.

Children should not be forcibly thrown into the water. If they naturally fear it their fear should be overcome in some way. Sometimes an exhibition of swimming on the part of a strong man will inspire them with a desire to learn the art. Sometimes a little bribing will help gain the desired result. Stories of great swimmers, too, help inspire children with a wish to learn to swim well. Cardinal Merry del Val is a good swimmer and once rescued some one from drowning; Prince Leopold of Bavaria is a royal patron of the sport; Jack London, the story writer, can swim as well as he can write, and many other famous men have had interesting experiences while they were swimming.

A little girl can often have her interest in swimming stimulated if her swimming-costume is attractive. For instance, a bright cap of waterproof silk or one of the red, blue or green rubber caps frilled about the face, with garters of frilled rubber to match, might prove attractive to a little girl who is timid about entering the water. The thought of wearing the pretty cap would keep her mind occupied so that she would forget her natural dislike of the water. After a few lessons almost every one becomes enthusiastic about learning to swim. It is the first few lessons that are difficult, and it is during these that a child sometimes needs coaxing.

IT'S VERY THRIFTY

To Know How to Utilize Leftover Envelopes.

Every woman who buys her stationery by the box or in even quantities of paper and envelopes finds that when her supply of paper is exhausted she still has on hand anywhere from two to six packages of envelopes. This is, of course, due to the fact that her letters are usually two or three sheets in length, while only one envelope is used.

These extra envelopes can be utilized by transforming them into the correspondence cards so popular nowadays. Trim off one-sixteenth of an inch from each edge of the envelope, throwing away the back and flap. The trimming can be done with the scissors if wielded by a steady hand, but a mechanical trimmer such as photographers use will make a neater job. A printer will do it for almost nothing. The resulting "card" will be just enough smaller than the envelope to fit into it easily, and if the paper is a good heavy quality the card really looks very well.

If you have enough of these leftover envelopes to warrant the trouble, the improvised correspondence cards may be imprinted with the house address or the monogram used on your regular stationery. They serve nicely for informal notes, hasty messages, mail orders, and so on.

French Convicts Leave Hope Behind When They Enter Cayenne.

Cayenne—red pepper to the world at large, hell to the few thousand of convicts transported to this isolated northeastern corner of equatorial South America. Here, it was rumored, existed one of the world's most antiquated and revolting penal systems, where thousands of men are exiled and doomed to a living death. Men from French Guiana had intimated conditions which vied with the cruelties of the old convict ships.

Groups of convicts lounged about or lay sick and incapacitated on the verandas. At night the barred iron door of each dormitory is locked, and outside paces a guard, revolver in hand. Sometimes under cover of darkness the inmates settle feuds. Occasionally to establish leaders rival gangs fight with cudgels, knives and even paving stones. Some disabled, others dead, the most indomitable are reconciled and form a tyrannical secret society.

Many a poor wretch dreads the night hours, and one suspected of informing may be set upon by an enraged pack. Occasionally murder is land, but the old and tried salts' cure's that "there ain't no sich thing as a cure."

Dick has just come in and says he's heard the latest remedy a "sure tip."
It's lime juice cordial. Put enough in cold water to make it taste pleasantly of the cordial and sip the beverage slowly the first thing upon awakening.

Before commencing this letter to you I was in the depths of despair
concerning my best damask tablecloth,
upon which a guest had spilled chocolate. You know what a wretched stain this beverage makes, and most remedies that are tried merely make bad worse. But where there's a will there's a way, and I've got hold of the chocolate way. Wash it out—I mean the chocolate—immediately in cool water, not hot water, and never use soap.

When, however, the injured article is silk or wool nothing I have learned is so efficacious as the following,
which is a genuine discovery arrived
at after much experimenting upon a chiffon blouse that had been rudely treated to a chocolate sundae: All you've got to do is to rub the spot
with pure glycerin, taking care to rub
it the way of the grain of the goods
and not round and round, as this makes a larger spot, which is a mistake often made.

When the glycerin has been well applied then wash with lukewarm water
the part that has been stained, rinsing
several times until all grease has been effaced. Now iron on the wrong side,
and hang in the sun for a little while.
At this season of soda it is well to make a mental note of this expedient,
for it will save the cleaner's bill.

Now, before this chat comes to a weekly pause let's get in a little fashion gossip. Here in New York and at the resorts the mustard colored parasol is in evidence. Indeed, it's the whim of the hour among the exclus-ives, although it's the ugliest thing
the mind of man could have conceived.

One cannot say, either, that the mustard colored parasol is cool looking,
but it is especially smart with its long handle of carved black wood. Carried with a black costume, such a sunshade is very effective, though it has its pronounced limitations as far as pink, blue and lavender are concerned.
The green parasol has been too much exploited by the masses, so unfurl your mustard sunshade and be in the swim,
but don't go over your depth, for the sun "do" fade this particular color
"woeful bad," believe yours devotedly, MABEL.

Ribbon Flowers on Parasols.
Small bunches of black and white satin rosebuds appear on the edge of one of the ribs and upon the handle of smart parasols. Medium large pink ribbon roses and foliage are arranged in wreath form around some parasols.

CAN YOU SWIM?

Every Woman Should Be Able to Teach Her Children to Swim.

It ought to be every woman's ambition when summer comes not only to learn to swim herself, but to see that her children learn to swim and so lessen
the possibility of accidents from drowning in her own family. No one who does not know how to swim ought to get into a canoe or rowboat, and if she does perchance risk her life in a launch she ought first to think of the responsibility her lack of knowledge of

under the trees knows how invaluable
it is to have one's sewing materials stowed away in a safe place. The quirements.

To Keep Ice Cream Firm Several Hours

If you want to keep ice cream cold
for several hours after it is packed and if the ice seems to be melting line
a zinc or aluminum receptacle with newspapers, pour in the ice and salt,
put the mold of ice cream, wrapped well in waxed paper, in the ice and salt and cover well with newspapers.
Ice cream packed in this way will keep in good condition for an hour or two longer than that packed in a wooden pail.

Turkish Draperies.

The new skirts are full in a most peculiar way. The fullness is around the body, while the effect is kept narrow around the foot. It would seem almost as if they had Turkish trousers
in mind.

Orange Pudding.

The secret of making orange pudding which has no bitter taste is to make the pudding without heating the orange. Cook the pudding first and then beat in the oranges last. If a meringue cooked brown is wanted on top of the pudding beat the whites, stiffen
them with sugar, use a teaspoonful
and a half to each white so that the meringue will be unusually stiff, and drop it in big spoonfuls on a granite pie plate. Brown it in the oven, and when it is cold slip the meringues on the pudding. It is cooking which makes the orange bitter, and a pudding
made in this way will be sweet.

Pastime For Children.

A sand pile in the back yard is a source of never ending pleasure. It will hold a child's interest longer if some colored marbles, shells, pebbles, etc., are mixed through it. Children should have play clothes. These little garments may consist of rompers or big aprons with short sleeves. There are many patterns for play clothes,
and none of them are difficult to make.

established leaders that gauge right with cudgels, knives and even paving stones.
Some disabled, others dead, the most indomitable are reconciled and form a tyrannical secret society.

Many a poor wretch dreads the night hours, and one suspected of informing may be set upon by an enraged pack. Occasionally murder is committed in profound silence, and daylight finds a dead or dying convict in the passageway or entrance. Questioning is useless, and few guards will risk life in entering the barracks when smothered cries and cursings warn them of internal strife.

All the men I talked with were well disposed toward me, one in particular—
a tall, well educated man with a pair of dark rimmed glasses and large eyes fearfully strained through inability to secure proper lenses.

"You must not lose hope," I told a group and almost swallowed my own words. "Hope!" burst out the rich, tremulous voice of the tall man. "It is always the same; there is no hope here." "No; no hope here!" was the echoed murmur of his comrades.—
Charles Wellington Furlong in Harper's Magazine.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Their Causes and Effects and the Treatment They Require.

A varicose vein is an enlarged and twisted vein, generally in the leg. It is caused by stagnation of the blood.
Often the patient has a hereditary predisposition to varicose veins or he has a weak heart, with a consequent tendency to sluggish venous circulation.

Anything that interferes with the flow of blood through the veins may bring on an attack. Pressure from a tight garter and very severe muscular exertion are often exciting causes. Persons who are obliged to stand for several hours at a time, like policemen, washerwomen and saleswomen, are often subject to this trouble. Under ordinary conditions the blood in the legs must run up hill constantly in order to regain the heart. In the case of those who stand most of the day the blood has to work hard hour after hour in order to overcome the force of gravity,
and as a result the veins gradually enlarge and harden.

In mild cases of varicose veins, especially in young and otherwise healthy people, the symptoms are very slight.
There is a feeling of weight in the leg
and a dull ache toward the end of the day. The ache is soon relieved by the patient's resting with the leg somewhat raised so that the blood can flow back more easily. Sometimes painful cramps complicate the trouble, and the cramp is likely to return again and again until life becomes a burden.

More serious complications are thrombosis (or the clotting of the blood in the vein) and phlebitis (or inflammation of a vein). Often a form of eczema appears in the skin of the leg, or an ulcer may arise. When varicose veins are very troublesome surgical treatment is advisable, but the milder cases can be much relieved by rest and proper bandaging.—Youth's Companion.

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hoberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay
the modest sum of $8000 per annum.
Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business.
We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire.
They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling.
What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man, contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspection at
